ABSTRACT

A network client may have a capability to load and maintain more than one active page image. To assist a user in selecting from a number of page images, a 5   graphical display element is provided corresponding to each active page image. When the graphical display element is preliminarily selected, an image including at least a portion of the page image is displayed in a pop-up window. The preliminary selection of the graphical display element may be pausing a mouse pointer over a tab corresponding to a page image.